> THURSDAY NEXT, NOV. 30TH. BENEFIT OF MR. ALFRED SINGER. 2032 Hongkong, 24th November, 1871. NOTICE.

THE Besidents of Chow Tow Tout make the following announcement:-The establishment of the How Yik Hong, Cotton Yarn Spinning Factory, at Chow Tow Taui, at Honam, Canton, has caused a great deal of anxiety and danger to the people in the neighbourhoud, as sparks of fire which come out from its furnace, are flying about both day and night over the tops of the neighbouring houses. Lately a spark fell on some bedding which was put on the roof of the Yu Cheong Shop to be sun dried, and it took fire, but fortunately it was quickly suppressed. On one occasion, the timber of a house took fire from the spark, and on another occasion, which was on the 2nd day of this moon, the timber of a neighbouring bouse again caught fire from the same cause. Fortunately it was not midnight, so that the flame was extinguished by the timely arrival of the fire engines belonging to this section of the pity... Considering that this kind of danger would never come to an end, a public meeting was hold in the temple next day, and to ensure safety of livesandproperty, and it was agreed that the proprietors should be ordered to remove or stop the work altogether. Mr. Lee, the landlord of the Factory, a resident, of Ngow Chow Street, was present at the meeting, and it was understood from him that he let the house to the proprietors only as a private residence, and not as a spinning factory, as it was afterwards converted to be and in order to prevent the danger of fire, he said he wished now to discontinue the lease. Mesers Fung, Lo, Kwan, and other managers of the factory, promised at the meeting to stop the work, and to consult with Mesere. Cheong, Ng. Wong, and other shareholders about removing the business to another epot, or, as they promised, to stop the work altogether, with a view to ensure safety to all parties. According to the law of this Province, all brick-kilps or furnaces are required to be erected in isolated and lonely apote, with a view to prevent danger, and ensure safety. With this law before us, it should be strictly obeyed Moreover, the danger caused by the furnace of this spinning factory is greater than brick-kiln. All of us are of the same country, possessing N EXTRAORDINARY GENERAL conscience, how is it that the public is thus in-MEETING of the SHABEBOLDERS of volved in danger? If they do not remove, not building take fire the loss to them is inconsiderable. But it is very different with the Acting Secretary. other people: if their houses were burnt, their lives and property are at stake. But supposing the proprietors of the factory be willing to pay compensation for the loss of other people's property, then both parties will suffer. The How Yik Hong Fuctory, it is understood, is insured against tire, to if it were destroyed, the proprietors will not spifer, as it is insured for an amount more than it is worth. If those houses in the neighbourhood are on fire the distress caused will be very difficult to fathom. The proprietors of the factory, if they possess conscience, should order their managers to remove the business to another spot for public safety, and the residents of Houam, and this section of the city, will thank them for this great favor.

The length of time was not a reason for a non-suit; but it might fairly be considered as affecting the nature of the testimony that would be expect. ed from the Defendants, and as being a valid reason for their bringing forward only second best evidence, though, if the case had been brought at an earlier date, they would have been called upon to bring best evidence. That a typhoon had occurred at the time the steamer put back, there was no doubt, and Mr. WELLER's testimony as to the state in | the defendant. which the vessel arrived was the best evidence place in the interim. The freight was insured in loud seclamations from the assembled thoubeen of a different nature to that given. The point might have arisen that the Defendants were bound to deliver anything which remained of the cargo, no matter how damaged, in order to clear themselves of responsibility, as there is an extreme case of this kind, to the freight before the vessel had broken away in his pocket, surveyed the scene from the where a vessel pumped out corn with sea water from the hold, and this was held to be delivery of part of the carge; but if this point were taken, it would probably fail to serve the Plaintiffs, as if proper evidence as to whether the cargo was so completely destroyed that no delivery was possible could not be procured, it would appear to be the Plaintiff's fault that this evidence also was not

The police cases yesterday were again of a uninteresting nature, consisting entirely of trivial offences.

We have received a copy of an interesting letter written by the Rev. T. V. N. Talmage to General Le Gendre, U. S. He believed this Church would be but the first of a series of buildings which would soon be erected on those hills, and render that one of the most populous parts of the town. Conservative wits have been very merry fo the last few days over the story of Mr. Gladstone and the Greenwich Advanced Liberal Association. It seems that the Advanced Liberal Association of Greenwich has held a meeting to pass a vote of confidence in Mr. Gladetone. and to ask him to come down to Greenwich and discourse to his constituents upon affairs of State. There was however, a most unlucky split in the advanced Liberal camp: some of the advanced Liberals present being so advanced as to regard Mr. Gladstone's policy volver of six chambers, of which five were with mistrust. Accordingly, when "motion was made and question put," it was found that distance of twelve yards. It was important to the ayes and the noes were evenly balanced. (Pall Mall Gazette.)

The latest news from Fiji states that the Provisional Supreme Court has been established, with three judges-one a native, a Crown prosecutor, and other officers. The newly established court, is addition to several murder pases, has bud to undertake the beavy task of some political trials—those of the Lovoni chiefs for high treason. The Lovonis came into Levuka, and gave in their formal submission to Thakombau. They numbered nearly 1,000 men, women, and obildren, and as they wore mustered in Levuka, a large number of the Bau forces were gatheredfully equipped, in order to overawe their adversaries should any attempt at disorder be made. The process of disarming then took place. It was subsequent to this submission that the political trials took place. In the meantime, in some extra-judicial manner, the whole tribe was collected and condemned in what seems to be a kind of domestic slavery for a term of five years as a punishment terrible severity by the tribe. The chiefs when before the court pleaded "guilty," and received from "his honour Mr. Justice Clarkson" the seeing that a meeting has been held of the beavier sentence of hard labour for life. At the same criminal sittings two men, natives, were sentenced to death, but their sentences were afterwards commuted to imprisonment for life. Symptoms of opposition to Thakumbau's constitutional government are increasing. At Nadroga a public meeting of the planters was held, and it was resolved that they would in no way acknowledge or recognize the authority of Thukombau or his quasi ministers. It was also determined "that this meeting highly deprecates the selfish, illiberal, and undignified course of policy thus far pursued by the few gentlemen claiming to reside in Levuka, and who have so unceremoniously attempted to thrust themselves upon an unwilling public. But at Levaka it appears that the prospect of the unwonted excitement of political elections of representatives to the meeting of delegates was viewed with great interest.

SCOTT'S POETRY .- Scott is not one of the cornsonting geniuses, throwing out epigrams ut every turn, and sparkling with good things. But the poetry, which was first admired to ercess and then rejected with undue contempt, is now beginning to find its due lovel. It is not poetry of the first order. It is not the poetry of deep meditation or of rapt enthusiaem. Much that was once admired has now become rather offensive than otherwise. And yet it has a familiar we grow-the charm of unaffected it perfectly in harmony with the nature which Scott loved so well, but it is still the best enery.—Cornkill Magazins,

M. Taine's "Ante on England." (From the Paris Temps.) I have been introduced to John H- a young and very obliging barriater. He lives in th

Tomple, a sort of nest of lawyers and law-stn-

dents in which a multitude of chambers remind one of a Quartier Latin and of a law corporation. The institution is composed of four Lunk of Court, each of which possesses a Hall where in the members dine, the student's objet duty being to eat, six dinners here every term for three years. A year's attendance in a barrister's chambers entitles the student to be called to the Bar without attending lectures. The professors are six in number, and attendance at a final examination is optional. There is no resemblance between this and an important Law School like ours, founded to teach the theory in the first instance. In like manner there is no Polytechnic School bere; he who wishes to become an engineer enters an engineer's office, where he learns by practica like a printer's assistant. This deficiency in highclass and systematised instruction, this omisthe theory of a profession, is yory noteworthy. eyes. To my mind the effect of reading Shakeand is thoroughly English. Besides, it would be no easy matter to deliver a course of lectures his personages so well when they are placed on English law. The law is not codified, as in France, upon accepted philosophical principles, but consists of a mass of statutes and precodents, more or less incongruous and sometimes. contradictory, which the future jurist must himself digest after long study. On the other hand, there is no school of History as in Ger. many, characterised by delicate that and com-

Let ne attend a sitting of the Courte at Westminster. In civil as in criminal canaes a jury is employed, its daty always consisting in settling affections of fact as distinguished from points of law. But a jury is employed in civil couses only at the request of the parties, whe have to pay the jurymen certain fees. We were present at three trials. One was a divorce case, in which the wife was the petitioner. This right has cossed to be an aristocratic and most costly privilege; it can now be exercised for the sum of £25 or £30, and is thus brought within reach of the bumblest purse. Moreover the reports of these divorce cases, which frequently appear in the newspapers, deserve last, but unwashed, the reason given by the and brutality of the husbands. The duty of counsel is very noteworthy, and is very different from that of French advocates. They examine witnesses as well as plead. At the hearing the plaintiff, the defendant, and each witness are examined and cross-examined by connect. The two counsel turn their man toktering lags, and loosened tongues. The third, inside out in encession, try to trip him up. to disconcart him, to make him contradict himself. Certainly it is not at all pleasant to be a witness in England, the quarter of an hour the reason was that she had taken too much at passed in the box being most trying. As a the Exhibition. I believe that among wellconsequence, the burden of the trial is borne by the counsel, the judge's function consisting merely in supervising, forbidding certain questions, tempering the ardour of the champions in court, as the Queen tempers the ardour of parties in Parliament. Such an active and varied 1870, furnishes material for curious speculapart as that played by counsel largely contributes to heighten their importance and sharpen takes great interest in the recovery of ladies their wits. With us they are too often phraseminners who plungs into rhetoric, and whom the judge heato silence; here, they are qualified, like our "Judges d'Instruction," to fathors and control men's minds. Three or four of them, with their pieroing eyes, clear and thrilling accents, rapid and decided gestures, appeared to me to be first-rate foxes into whome visited Obelsen, and each time seen men lying clutches I should not like to fall. The wife whom I saw under examination stood in a little. as a Southern woman would have done, but she tremens and other alcoholic muladies. Accordwith an accent of conviction, the word "never"

the weak points of the evidence nor exagge- the punning inscription, " My best spirit." rates the points beyond dispute. He weight his words, translating his carefully-formed opinion into clear language, and when he adds 11011868. LABOS, Tenements, &c. moral condemnation to the legal sentence, the gravity and nobleness of his tones are worthy of all praise. More than once I have thought that if Justice herself could speak she would employ this style of language. The man himself is THE Two Commodious 8 Roomed HOUSES, transformed into the simple organ of truth and | known as 1 and 2, Westbourne Villas, of rectitude. The prisoner at the bar cannot and situated on the Caine Road, Stabling, help bowing before such a power as this, and Flower and Kitchen Gardens. Gas and Water assenting to the justice of his sentence, I know laid on. Apply to no other spectacle which can as solemnly imprint in men's hearts veneration for the law. Yet in this, as in other cases, the bad and the good commingle. I am told that the result of the English form of legal procedure is to protect the individual at the expense of society. that it is too difficult to obtain legal proof, and that many guilty persons go unpunished.

"Good society does not go to the theatres, with the exception of the two opera houses. which are the exotic and hot-house plants of luxury, and in which the prices of admission are enormous and evening dress is imperative. As to the others, the audience is recruited from among the lower middle-class. There is no longer a national Comedy in England; playwrights translate or adapt French pieces. This is very extraordinary; for they have still living manners fitted for representation on the stage. In addition, their novels prove how well they can depict characters. Satirio bumour they have always had in abundance; during the last century they had excellent comic dramatists | the Hon. J. PAUNCEFOTE. and performers. How comes it, then, that in London there is no Comedy, and that in Paris there is one? Is it because there is a scarcity of droll personages in England P. It appears to me that they abound more than elsewhere, seeing that types are there more sharply defined and are developed even to arcess. Is it because prudery of manuers taboos laughter? There is no hindrance to decent merriment, improper joking being alone forbidden. Is it because English reserve has suppressed immoderate gesticulation, spontaneous and free expression of feelings P But the source of intercat hes in the situation, and grave personages can play a part in the most exciting performance. The whole matter is a puzzle, especially for the reader who has just turned over the pages of a novel by Dickens, or of an album by MONT," at present in the occupation of J.

John Leech. This ovening I went to the Olympia: a small house corresponding in some measure to our Palais Royal. The opening piece was a burlesque on the Merchant of Venice, filled with puns and jokes. To enjoy such tomfooleries one must be a native of the country. The other piece, Dearest Mamma, is based on Belle-Mera et Gendre. Addison, one of the actors, plays the part of an old nucle with surprising spirit orty. and fidelity. Imagine to youself a large, bald, and hearty gentleman, rotund, with his coat closely buttoned, thoroughly enjoying life, wellpleased to be a widower and unattached, uniformly good-tempered, wholly concerned in preserving "his equilibrium;" who eats his six repasts and takes his three constitutionals daily, who hums tunes on all occasions, who winds up his contences with a whistle like that of an old blackbird, who drops off to sleep in every easy ohair, and who, bardened by the tempests of wedded life, wage his head, and ends by snoring comfortably when he is being soundly raied. The type is complete, both morally and physically; it is original and sym pathetic, very comical and very natural, and perfectly rendered.

Shakespeare is played at intervals. I ours and Mr. Macready in Macbeth, in which he showed himself powerful and dramatic, especially in the scene where Banquo's ghost appears, and where, breathless with fear and with a hourse cry, he casts himself on the ground like a maddened bull. The public still laughs when Hamlet says in the churchyard that the noble dust of Alexander might now be used to stop a bung-hole. Our oyee have been too much obanged by habit; we have lost the naivete of the sixteenth century; the illusion is deatroyed by the too frequent shifting of the scenery; we cannot now believe in the armies represented by six combatants, and in battles fought upon the stage. Even in England aducated persons would be disgusted to witness Cornwall publicly plucking out Gloucoster's by representing them; at least I do not realise before me through the medium of an actor.
